TRAPICHE

ARGENTINA

Trapiche is located in Mendoza at the foothills of Los Andes and is Argentina's largest exported Premium brand, exporting today its wines to more than 80 countries world wide. Trapiche represents "the richness of diversity" in Argentina. Throughout its history, it has understood like no other the strength of the viticulture in Argentina and it has specialized in obtaining the best from every site to create unique wines. This diversity is founded in more than 1,000 ha of its own vineyards and obtaining grapes from more than 200 independents producers in the best winegrowing areas of Argentina. In its wide and diverse portfolio, Trapiche proposes the best wine for every consumption occasion, being always at the forefront of the international trends in wine styles and packaging. Quality, innovation and diversity have always been Trapiche's fundamental drivers, the basis on which it stands and moves forward.

Segura Viudas

The Segura Viudas building, which dates back to the 11th century, was initially a watchtower. The various architectural styles visible today—Visigothic, Romanesque and Gothic—are the result of several work extensions. In the 13th century the tower lost its military importance and was converted into a masia, the name given to country houses in Catalonia. At the end of the 19th century, when the region became aware of the potential of the various indigenous varieties and the first steps were taken in the application of the traditional method, the estate produced its first sparkling wines.

Segura Viudas became a brand in 1950 but it was not until 1969 that it began to market its wines, the quality of which stood out right from the beginning. The installations were later equipped with state-of-the-art technology to ensure perfection of the process. The passage of time has been favourable to the company and the prestige of the brand has increased even more in recent years. It is difficult to find a wine-producing firm that has acquired so much international recognition in such a short time.
